Prehistoric Men don't live in caves but at the bottom of cliffs in shelters completed with branches and closed with skins,

They have a wandering live:
:during summer they settle in pasture land where reindeer or buffalos graze or near a river to fish, During winter they move to valleys where they can find water wood , flint and game.

How is their camp made?
Several tents with a wood frame and recovered with animal skins, In cold regions tents are put in the earth and made with mammoths bones. Not only bones of hunted mammoths but also bones of dead animals found near rivers or elsewhere,

Where did Prehistoric Men sleep ?
They slept on gras or seaweeds beds, A big flat stone was used as pillow, a bear or buffalo skin as a rug.

To build their house they use what they find in their surroundings,
